

The Sports Factory Development Model.

We believe in stimulating growth and a model of church which sees us:

- Connect with people who are not in church
- Develop new leaders

The Sports Factory have a tried and tested model of building relationships that develop over time through a range of activities such as sports quizzes, residentials, Alpha Courses, etc. As work is scoped it will be mapped onto the 'Pizza Slice' model. Interactions are designed to deepen both personal and spiritual relationships over time – the main objective always being to introduce people to God.

As people develop and move into the center of the 'Pizza' and as they move between stages they will be supported to develop as leaders. Each activity operates the 'Square' model of training to develop volunteers and participants to ensure multiplication and that activities are sustainable in the long term. This model also helps develop a disciple making approach.

As leaders are developed, we need to ensure they are both released into their calling and supported. The net model recognizes that we need safety nets - but we also need to avoid wrapping people up in cotton wool and enable them to take decisions and work independently so there are some safety nets and some tight ropes.

The Sports Factory is a group of connected organisations working together to share best practice, support one another and develop a shared ministry.
